

Reflection.

“And God called the dry land Earth, and the gathering together of the waters He called Seas. And God saw that it was good.” Gen 1:10 (KJV)

While I find God’s presence throughout the natural world, I continuously discover His power through water. There is something truly living about His Waters, making it a source of peace and power. Early on, He united the waters, calling it the Seas, and, more importantly, calling it good.

Cycling on two levels, the surface and the skies, this water acts as the life giving circulatory system that keeps the world in check—giving and taking away in a second. Powerful enough to move a mountain or sometimes a city, and yet gentle and patient enough to smooth even the roughest of edges through years or even an eon of work. It is the same water that quenches thirst and baptizes. His extensive oceans, rivers, streams, lakes, ponds, wetlands, aquifers, all unite together sooner or later to circle the globe cooling, comforting, sometimes terrifying, but ultimately giving life to all things and people.
